Highlights of the MOU include: SDMC has agreed to provide SEIS with the following student-level data elements (“Shared Data”) for past and current students enrolled in the CCB programs throughout the state of California; and CCB program includes but is not limited to gender, race/ethnicity, first-generation college student status, and students’ perceptions of benefits of participation, job status, earnings, and loan selections.

Deliverables include: SEIS will provide SDMC with a report with descriptive statistics. The report will adhere to previous descriptive reports that SDMC has produced. Furthermore, SEIS will provide SDMC with the syntax created to run the descriptive analyses. Finally, SEIS will produce additional descriptive analyses (disaggregating data by zip code, loan by ethnicity, etc.) that SDMC finds valuable. SDMC and SEIS will agree on a timeline to deliver the additional descriptive analyses. SEIS is committed to supporting SDMC’s future data collection and data analyses efforts on CCBs.

Hai Hoang shared UCLA will conduct a detailed study around three colleges. They are still in the process of identifying which three colleges they will focus on. The goal is to choose three colleges from different majors and geographic locations.
